

PANTHER POST

Empowering Students Through A Fun and Meaningful Anti-Bullying Assembly

At Hilbert Elementary, the commitment to fostering a safe and inclusive environment is not just a motto, but a lived reality. To further cultivate a welcoming environment for all, a recent assembly brought together excitement, entertainment, and a powerful message about the importance of kindness and respect.

Students were joined by Jim “Basketball” Jones for an energetic assembly focusing on doing the right thing and treating others with kindness. The assembly provided students a fun and creative way to learn the importance of kindness, while being entertained by Mr. Jones’ impressive basketball skills.

Mr. Jones seamlessly wove together his dazzling display of talent with anecdotes and insights about the power of inclusion and the impact of bullying that was catered to each grade.

What made this assembly truly special was its interactive nature. Rather than simply listening passively, students were invited to join in the fun and take an active role in the experience. They had the opportunity to try their hand at some basketball tricks, fostering a sense of empowerment and achievement, and they even had a chance to lead their teachers in a dance contest. Unfortunately, we’ve been sworn to secrecy on who won.

Through the assembly, students were not only provided with a memorable and enjoyable experience but also a crucial lesson about the power of empathy and inclusion. By emphasizing the importance of doing the right thing and treating others the way we would like to be treated, Hilbert Elementary continues to empower students to create a positive and supportive community where everyone feels valued and accepted.

